		25X1

1. In mid-May and early June 1953, German workers were temporarily employed on grating up windows of a shed at Jueterbog-Damm airfield which they believed housed a DF equipment repair shop. The workers involved were continuously guarded. 25X1
 2. The repair shop was headed by air force Major Filippov (fnu), and surrounded by a board fence. In mid-May, [redacted] radio trucks [redacted] besides a set from where four cables extended to the antenna of a type Dumbo radar in front of the repair shop. In early June, the dipole system was removed from the antenna mast. 25X1
 3. [redacted] numerous crates piled up in front of a hangar. Some of these crates were taken to the repair shop in early June. Air force officers seen at the field wore an insignia representing wings with crossed hammers. 25X1
- Comment. It has repeatedly been reported that repair work on radio equipment was being performed in one of the hangars of the airfield. For location sketch of the hangars available at the field, see Annex. 25X1
